Useful Tips:

- Do not complain to more than one Authority at the same time
- Give the Police Complaint Authority some time to decide on your complaint
- If you don't hear anything from them, write to the Police Complaint Authority asking for information about the progress of your case
- If you receive no response then you can approach the other allied institutions or even the courts.
- You can also make use of the Right to Information Act to procure any document which has not been provided to you by the commissions or the Police Complaint Authority or in case of inordinate delay in disposing of the complaint.
